Regarding - National Planning Framework.

In regard to the planning for towns and cities around the country Drogheda is not mentioned at all in this document, which I feel is not right considering its location and distance to the capital of our country of Ireland.

The town of Drogheda has always been an industrial town, but seems to have been forgotten by the government in this case. Over half the population of the town commute to Dublin and the surrounds every day to work and keep this county up in the industrial ranks as one of the most prominent and highly potential places for investment in the world.

I have working in the technical manager within the finance area and have had to travel for over 20 years out of the biggest town in Ireland to jobs to Dublin.

Drogheda needs to be in the investment and infrastructure plan as Dublin and the surrounds are running out space for homes and company sites. The government needs to see the bigger picture. Open its eyes and see what's right beside them ready for investment and growth in infrastructure.

The young people of Drogheda that are growing up, will be the talent of the future, they are your investment into the country and jobs within towns, Drogheda is the highest populated town in Ireland... the government needs to look ahead and invest, and not forget.

I feel the government needs to include Drogheda into the National Planning Framework as and see the phenomenal potential that we have in this town for grown and expansion.

We as a town should not be dismissed, I and my fellow citizens of this town want it to be best it can together and the government needs to "MAKE IT HAPPEN" by including Drogheda in the Infrastructure plan.

Kind Regards
